Detailed View of Sagaponack

The name Sagaponack comes from a Shinnecock Indian word meaning "land of the big ground nuts." Of course, to the Indians "ground nuts" were potatoes. It was first settled in 1656 by Josiah Stanborough who built a house in the area known as Sagg, today called Sagaponack.

Sagaponack is a part of Bridgehampton, the name was given to the area following the creation of the parish of that name out of the settlements named Sagg and Mecox in 1699. This parish was named for the Bridge that was built to connect these two settlements. Since that time the area has been a whaling, farming, and resort community.

Sagaponack is located in Suffolk County, New York on the southeastern end of Long Island. Nearby towns include: Bridgehampton, Mecox, Sag Harbor and Wainscott. Sagaponack is less than 10 minutes from grocery stores, diverse clothing and speciality shops, movie theatres and the Easthampton Airport. The Shinnecock Hills Golf Club in Southampton, site of the 2004 U.S. Open in June, is also just a short drive away.
